WHY THIS PROJECT IS A MUST TODAY!

“Unless the evangelical Church can recover the knowledge of what it means to live before a holy God, unless in its worship it can relearn humility, wonder, love, and praise, unless it can find again a moral purpose in the world that resonates with the holiness of God and that is accordingly deep and unyielding — unless the evangelical Church can do all of these things, theology will have no place in its life. But the reverse is also true. If the Church can begin to find a place for theology by refocusing itself on the centrality of God, if it can rest upon His sufficiency, if it can recover its moral fiber, then it will have something to say to a world now drowning in modernity. And there lies a great irony. Those who are most relevant to the modern world are those most irrelevant to the moral purpose of God, but those who are irrelevant in the world by virtue of their relevance to God actually have the most to say to the world. They are, in fact, the only ones who having anything to say to it. That is what Jesus declared, what the Church in its best moments has known, and what we, by the grace of God, can yet again discover.”

- p.310, “No Place For Truth”, David F. Wells.

Abraham's son Isaac was a smart man. According to Genesis 26:18, he dug again the wells of water his father had dug that the enemy had filled up. Christians today are always looking for something new when they ought to get acquainted with something old -- the spiritual giants of the past. We need to dig again the old wells and listen to the messages of the giants of the past!

A Personal Note:

Following our Annual Fall Bible Conference a guest came to me and said, "I didn't realize what Biblical Exposition was until I came to the conference. I also didn't realize that I have been sitting under very shallow preaching." It was this statement along with the suggestion of Warren Wiersbe that I realized that Songtime needed to share the wealth of teaching, preaching, and testimonies from our library. Some of the material goes back to 1948. The time has come for you to enjoy the impact of these effective communicators.
